SCHOOL Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown, New York University, Washington Square. Dear Sir: I beg to submit herewith a report of the Summer School for 1911. Yours respectfully, James E. Lough, Director. The seventeenth-session of the Summer School was held at University Heights July 5th--August 15th, 1911. One hundred and thirty-eight courses aggregating one hundred and sixty-seven hours were offered by a Faculty of fifty-four professors and instructors. The courses were divided into two large groups--Courses Primarily Pedagogical, which are intended for teachers; Courses Primarily Collegiate, which include all work of a more cultural character. Fifty-five courses were offered in the first group and eighty-three courses in the second group. Summer courses equivalent to courses offered during the collegiate year were credited in the following Divisions of the University: University College; School of Applied Science; Graduate School; School of Pedagogy; Collegiate Division and School of...
