Until Adam sinned and disobeyed God man was without sin. 2. that forbidden tree, the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the fruit of which Adam and Eve were forbidden to taste. As forbid in the active voice can govern two accusatives, one of the person, another of the thing, in the passive we may say either that a person is forbidden to do something, or, as here, that something is forbidden. mortal taste, taste producing death. Mortal is used in the same sense in the common phrase mortal wound. See i. 766; ii. 729; and note on i. 266. 3. death. The whole human race was made liable to death in order to punish Adam and Eve for their act of disobedience. 4. loss of Eden. Adam and Eve were also, as a punishment for the same offence, driven out of the beautiful garden of Eden, in which they dwelt before their fal1. In this line Eden means the garden of Eden; in the last line of the poem, and in iv. 210, Eden means the country in which the garden was situated. After Adam and Eve had been expelled from the garden of Eden they were still in the country of Eden. one greater Man, Jesus Christ, who by His death on the cross atoned for the sin of the first man and obtained for the human race restoration to Paradise.
